As we are running make clean first, shouldn't the first lines be any removals and then gcc after? I failed this test because the line did not begin with gcc.

make clean should remove derivative files (the object files and the executable). make should build the executable, if necessary (and indirectly build any object files that need to be rebuilt).

Whoops, my makefile wasn't building rbt.o correctly. Should work now.